Saturday 7:49 PM

i want to create fitakha website. i am thinking of having about us, team profile, mission, faqs or section where people can go through personas to identify their posture and fitness needs and find answers that will find right fitness program for them alongwith links to our exercises on fitakha channel, contact us, a section for adding list of nutrionists, coaches, fitakha apparels. suggest me a good structure.

For Fitakha, I'd organize the website around one main journey: "Find where to start → understand your needs → discover a suitable program → get support." Keep your brand promise—"Ignite What Moves You"—visible throughout.

Your ideas fit well into this structure:

Main navigation	What it contains	Purpose
Home	Brand introduction, "Find Your Starting Point" questionnaire, featured programs, exercise videos, coach highlights	Quickly explain Fitakha and help visitors take their first step
Find Your Fit	Guided questionnaire, relatable personas, fitness goals, available equipment, time and preferences	Help people explore suitable starting options
Workouts & Learn	Fitness programs, searchable exercise library, Fitakha YouTube videos, technique guides, FAQs	Bring exercise instruction and practical answers together
Find an Expert	Coaches, nutritionists/dietitians, and eventually other specialists	Connect visitors with personalized support
Shop	Fitakha apparel and future accessories	Give merchandise a clear home

Main navigation	What it contains	Purpose
About Fitakha	Our story, mission, approach, team profiles	Build trust and explain what makes Fitakha different

Put Contact Us in the footer and About menu, with a visible contact link on expert and program pages. Your main navigation button should be “Find Your Fit.”

1. Home: explain the value before introducing the company

I suggest this homepage sequence:

1. Headline: “Fitness that starts with you.”
   Supporting copy: “Explore workouts, understand your movement, and find support that fits your goals, experience, and everyday life.”
2. Primary button: “Find Your Fit”
   Secondary button: “Explore Workouts”
3. Choose your starting point: Cards representing common visitor needs.
4. How Fitakha works: Tell us about yourself → explore suitable options → start moving.
5. Featured programs: A few clear options with duration, experience level and equipment.
6. Learn the moves: Selected videos from your Fitakha channel.
7. Meet your support team: Featured coaches and nutrition professionals.
8. Our mission: A short introduction linking to About Fitakha.
9. Common questions and contact.

Keep apparel farther down the homepage so the fitness journey remains the main focus.

2. Find Your Fit: make this your signature section

Use personas as relatable entry points, followed by a short questionnaire. People often relate to a situation more easily than a technical fitness category.

Persona card	What the visitor is looking for	Suggested destination
“I’m starting from scratch”	Simple instructions and a manageable routine	Beginner program collection
“I want to manage my weight”	Consistency, activity and nutrition support	Goal-based programs and nutrition directory
“I spend most of my day sitting”	Movement breaks and posture education	Mobility guides and beginner strength options

Persona card	What the visitor is looking for	Suggested destination
“I’m getting back into exercise”	A gradual restart	Return-to-exercise starting options
“I want to get stronger”	Structured resistance training	Strength programs by experience and equipment
“I want better balance and mobility”	Confidence in everyday movement	Balance and mobility collection
“I’m training for a sport or event”	More specific preparation	Sport-focused programs and coach matching
“I need workouts for home or travel”	Convenient sessions with limited equipment	Short, equipment-filtered workouts

The questionnaire could ask about:

- Main goal and exercise experience.
- Days available and preferred session length.
- Home, gym or travel setting and equipment.
- Preferred activities.
- Movement limitations or concerns that affect exercise selection.

Treat posture content as education and guided observation, rather than a tool that diagnoses someone from a persona or photograph. Pain, dizziness, recent surgery or other relevant concerns should lead to an appropriate professional-review route before an automated program recommendation.

The result page should show:

> Your suggested starting point
> Why this option fits your answers · Suggested program · Relevant exercise videos · Helpful FAQs · Option to speak with a coach

Let people explore an initial result without requiring an account. Offer to save their preferences afterward.

3. Workouts & Learn: connect every answer to an action

Within this section, create three connected areas:

Area	Recommended organization
Programs	Goal, experience, session duration, weekly frequency, equipment and workout type
Exercise Library	Body area, movement, equipment, difficulty and workout type
Guides & FAQs	Getting started, technique, posture and movement, progression, recovery and using Fitakha

Each program page should explain who it is for, its schedule, required equipment, exercises and progression.

Each exercise page should include:

- An embedded Fitakha YouTube video.
- Instructions and key technique cues.
- Muscles targeted.
- Common mistakes.
- Easier and harder variations.
- Related exercises and programs.

This gives visitors a useful website experience while also directing them to your channel.

4. Find an Expert: one directory with clear categories

Start with Coaches and Nutrition Professionals, then add other categories when available.

Profiles should include a photo, biography, credentials, specialties, languages, location/time zone, online or in-person availability, and a clear inquiry or booking button. Distinguish professional titles and show credential verification only when you have actually completed it.

Include a "Join as an Expert" page for professionals interested in listing with Fitakha.

5. About Fitakha: combine story, mission and team

You do not need separate main navigation links for About Us, Mission and Team. Group them under About Fitakha:

- Our Story: Why you started Fitakha.
- Our Mission: Who you want to serve and the difference you want to make.
- Our Approach: Personalized starting points, practical education and human support.
- Our Team: Actual roles, relevant experience and what each person contributes.

- Contact Us: General questions, partnerships and support.

Launch in two practical stages

Launch first	Add when operational
Home, About, team and contact	Member accounts and saved plans
Persona cards and a short questionnaire	More advanced personalized recommendations
A small collection of complete programs	Progress tracking and health-data integrations
Exercise library linked to your channel	Expanded exercise and program collections
Expert profiles with inquiry forms	Booking, payments and expert dashboards
Useful FAQs	Reviews from verified customers
Apparel interest or launch notification page	Full apparel store with fulfillment and returns

My recommendation: make “Find Your Fit” the centerpiece, with programs, videos and experts connected to its results. That gives Fitakha a clear purpose beyond being a company brochure and creates a natural foundation for your future app and recommendation engine.

ChatGPT can make mistakes. Check important info.